The answer is yes, but they may be difficult to see if the light source is not very bright (has a low light intensity). Shadows are also more definite (sharper) where there is contrast between the shadow and the lit surface, for example, a shadow on a white wall will be more easily seen. The size of the light source can sharpen or blur the shadow.

The direct light is much more directional and there is less ambient light (no sky). What happens there is that the lightest part of the shadow is towards the bottom of the object, with bounced light from the surface the spheres are sitting on. The core shadow is higher and has less light, and of course the ambient occlusion has next to none.
